Conservation Day at Kent

Monday 16th March 2026

A-level or college students studying biology, environmental science or related subjects are invited to join us at the University of Kent for a day of workshops, talks and activities designed to bring learning to life.

Through practical, interactive sessions both in lecture theatres and outdoors, students will explore topics like biodiversity, climate change, populations and communities, ecosystems, habitat conservation, and species recovery.

Delivered by the multi-award-winning Durrell Institute of Conservation and Ecology, Exploring Ecology is an interactive day of talks and workshops specifically designed with AQA, OCR, and Edexcel specifications in mind, to give students a deeper understanding of how their studies are applied in the wider field of conservation and ecology.

This event will take place at the University of Kent's Canterbury Campus on Monday 16th March 2026.

To book onto this event, please email outreach@kent.ac.uk with the number of students you wish to bring.
