

Generations network – workshop 2

Generational identities and the problem of 'presentism' Wednesday 1st April 2020, Canterbury Christ Church University

(now via Zoom) @GenerationsNet

10:45	Arrival and Zoom tutorial
	11:00-13:00 Discussion of key questions, part 1:
11:00- 11:30	0) Who we each are, and why we are interested in this topic Around the room
11:30- 12:05	1) How and why do generational identities form? Discussion initiated by short talks from: Judith Burnett: The sociology of generations as a concept Peter Hegarty (Surrey): How do generational identities feel distinct, and for whom?
12:10- 13:00	2) What is the significance of generational identities? Discussion initiated by short talks from: Jan Macvarish: Thinking about siblings: the formation of generational identity within the family Karen Glaser (KCL): Cohort differences in later life work
13:00- 14:00	Lunch break
	14:00-16:00 Discussion of key questions, part 2:
14:00- 14:55	3) How has the significance of generational identities changed over historical time? Discussion initiated by short talks from: Trev Broughton (York): Multi-generational nineteenth-century biographies Martin Hewitt (Anglia Ruskin): Generational identities and history
15:05- 16:00	4) How can we use the concept of 'generations' while avoiding 'generationalism'? Discussion initiated by short talks from: Jennie Bristow (CCCU): The problem of 'generation gaps' Rebecca Blaylock (BPAS): Epigenetics and generational transmission Ann Gallagher (Surrey): Cross-cultural perspectives on obligations to elders
16:00- 16:30	Coffee break
16:30-17:30 Reflections and conclusions on our key questions + What next?	